

To me, Sinclair's actions clearly qualify as electioneering and are therefore subject to the strictest of federal regulation. Furthermore, what they are presenting as a factual, objective documentary is clearly biased and no doubt in many instances as blatantly dishonest as the now-notorious swift boat ads. Therefore, this crockumentary also is presumably guilty of slander and/or libel. For the good of the country, for the good of our liberties, for the sake of the honor of John Kerry and his family, for the sake of the honor of the people responsible for this program and their families, this must not be shown on television, much less forced down the proverbial throats of local networks across our great land.
